The use of architecture describes the interlocking, networking, and connective tissues of computers and the people that use them.